Lake County Waterway History

Nearby to your new Florida Waterfront home lays the most well-known waterway in Lake County, the Dora Canal. The Dora Canal was penned in the 1930s by a leading sports writer as "the most beautiful mile of water in the world." The Dora Canal, lined with towering cypress trees that are draped with Spanish moss, is a safe haven for many of Florida's beautiful waterfowl, such as the nesting ospreys, herons and egrets and home to many residents that enjoy Florida Waterfront living. In the 1830s, the Dora Canal was not only popular for its natural Florida beauty, but because the mile-long connection linked the two important lakes of Dora and Eustis. Cities bordering the two lakes are those of Eustis, Tavares and Mount Dora. Together the municipalities form the Golden Triangle area of Lake County. Each city sports its own heritage and quaint downtown district that are a hit with tourists and locals alike. Originally called the Elfin River, the Dora Canal was unofficially born in the late 1800s when the captain of a steamboat assembled a team of laborers to help make the waterway more passable. Today, the Dora Canal, along with the nearby Dead River and Haynes Creek, are popular spots for guided scenic tours and many a Florida Boat club. Hundreds of tourists and locals each year take these enchanting cruises to view the waterways' breathtaking beauty and wildlife. The scenery of the Dora Canal also captured the imagination of Hollywood as a portion of the Humphrey Bogart classic "African Queen" was filmed along the waterway. Besides viewing wildlife such as otters, alligators and wading birds, visitors to the canal can also take note of the towering cypress trees, with some being 2,000 years old.
